CAN WE NOT BECOME MATURE?

For the last several months, there are reports from various parts of the country that some fake calls are being received by the pensioners which are originated from some telephone numbers in NCR Delhi asking them to send some money to get release of huge pending balance amount in their GPF accounts. Calls are also received for releasing some unpaid bonus on the LIC policies. These are nothing new. We also receive many mails in our e-mail accounts informing us to disclose our bank account details for payment of huge amount payable to us on account of winning some lotteries or transfer of assets from some unknown donors. Unfortunately, some people fall prey to such allurements and respond to such calls – finally landing themselves in trouble.

It is unfortunate that the pensioners - even at the executive level do not apply their mind before acting in response to such calls. First of all, GPF is not controlled and managed centrally from Delhi. It is the Circles which handle the same. Moreover, at the end of each financial year we used to receive GPF balance sheets indicating the total annual contribution made by us and the interest accrued on them which also indicated the total balance. At the time of retirement, we receive every penny that is due to us on account of GPF contribution. We also get ourselves satisfied that we did receive the actual amount. Then from where there could be any pending balance now? Let our greed for money not invite more problem for us. As regards bonus of LIC policies, we know that on their maturity, the insurers are paid the entire policy amount including the bonus. And the LIC will never make any phone call, it will write letters at the last known address. But this also never happens, since after payment the policies are treated as closed. The Banks also advise us through SMS or e-mail that we must not disclose our bank account, card details to any one and the banks themselves do not ask the customers to reveal the same to them. Then why should we offer ourselves to be duped?

Those keeping a watch on our website know that our Association had taken up the issue with the CBI Director who in turn sent the case to the Economics Offence Wing. They also referred the matter to the Dy. Commissioner of Police (West). We also know that a gang of people operating such a racket in Noida were also arrested. Then why should we not become wise and protect ourselves?

It is to be noted that such calls are not received only by the retired executives. They are received even by other pensioners

Including the pensioners of other Departments. In fact, the very first two cases that we took up with CBI Director were from the Executives from the stations in Karnataka and Kerala where we had no branch. It appears that this has become an industry to make easy money. Those receiving such calls may lodge complaints with local Police giving the details.

Let us behave rationally and not allow ourselves to be duped.

PRIME MINISTER'S TRIBUTE TO DR A P J ABDUL KALAM

BHARAT has lost a Ratna, but the light from this jewel will guide us towards APJ Abdul Kalam's dream-destination: India as a knowledge superpower, in the first rank of nations. Our scientist-President -and one who was genuinely loved and admired across the masses - never measured success by material possessions. For him, the counterpoint to poverty was the wealth of knowledge, in both its scientific and spiritual manifestations. As a hero of our defence programme, he shifted horizons; and as a seer of the spirit, he sought to liberate doctrine from the narrow confines of partisan tension to the transcendental space of harmony.

Every great life is a prism, and we bathe in those rays that find their way to us. His profound idealism was secure because it rested on a foundation of realism. Every child of deprivation is a realist. Poverty does not encourage illusions. Poverty is a terrible inheritance; a child can be defeated even before he or she has begun to dream. But Kalamji refused to be defeated by circumstances. As a boy, he had to support his studies by earning money as a newspaper vendor; today, page after page of the same newspapers are filled with his obituary notices. He said that he would not be presumptuous enough to say that his life could be a role model for anybody; but if some poor child living in an obscure and underprivileged social setting found some solace in the way his destiny had been shaped, it could perhaps help such children liberate themselves from the bondage of illusory backwardness and helplessness. He is my marg darshak, as well as that of every such child.

His character, commitment and inspirational vision shine through his life. He was unencumbered by ego; flattery left him cold. He was equally at ease before an audience of suave, globe-trotting ministers and a class of young students. The first thing that struck one about him was that, uniquely, he combined the honesty of a child with the energy of a teenager and the maturity of an adult. He took little from the world, and gave all he could to society. A man of deep faith, he epitomised the three great virtues of our civilization: dama, self-restraint; dana, sacrifice; and daya, compassion.

But this persona was powered by the fire of endeavour. His vision for the nation was anchored in freedom, development and strength. Given our history, freedom had a political context of course; but it also included freedom of the mind and expansion of intellectual space. He wanted India to leap out of the under-developed trough, and eliminate the curse of poverty through inclusive economic growth. Wisely, he suggested that politicians spend only 30% of their time on politics, and 70% on development; a suggestion which he often followed up by calling in MPs from a state and discussing the socio-economic issues of their region with them. The third pillar, strength, was not born of aggression, but of understanding. An insecure nation will rarely discover the route to prosperity. Strength commands respect. His contributions in our nuclear and space achievements have given India the muscle to be confident of her place in the region and the world.

His memory is best honoured by the creation of new institutions that nurture science and technology, and enable us to find a beneficial equation with the awesome power of nature. Too often, greed makes us predators of our environment. Kalamji saw poetry in a tree, and energy that could be harnessed in water, wind and sun. We should learn to look at our world through his eyes, and with the same missionary zeal.

Human beings can shape their lives through will, persistence, ability and sheer courage. But we have not been given the right to script where we are born, or how and when we die. However, if Kalamji had been offered an option, this is how he would perhaps have chosen to say goodbye: on his feet, and in front of a classroom of his beloved students. As a bachelor, he was childless. But that is wrong. He was a father to every Indian child, teaching, cajoling, urging, exciting, clearing darkness wherever he found it with the radiance of his vision and the passion of his involvement. He saw the future, and showed the way. As I entered the room where his body lay in state, I noticed the painting at the entrance that depicted a few lines from an inspirational book he wrote for children, Ignited Minds. The good that he did will not be interred with his bones, because his children will preserve his memory through their lives and work, and gift it to their children.

CABINET NOTE ON REVISION OF PENSION WITH FITMENT BENEFIT OF MERGER OF 78.2% IDA

We have been time and again telling that current proposal of DOT to allow revision of pension with fitment benefit of merger of 78.2% IDA in its present form as incorporated in its draft cabinet note may result in raising some queries from some Ministries – thus delaying these Ministries to send their final views, since it again includes a proposal which was not approved earlier by DoP&PW and DOE. This relates to payment of enhanced DCRG, CVP to the pensioners who retired between 1.1.2007 and 9.6.2013. Earlier, DOT could not convince DOP&PW and DOE on this issue by its arguments. But now DOT is said to have strong arguments in its favour and therefore included the same proposal in its draft cabinet note. Quite naturally, DOE which earlier sent its views with the approval of its Minister (Finance) rejecting the proposal would like to be fully convinced before it gives its revised views/comments now. Therefore, there is no reason to feel perturbed if DOE asks DOT for some clarifications. This is a normal and routine procedure. We are to understand that there is no dispute on the question of allowing revision of pension with fitment benefit of merger of 78.2% IDA. This is a settled issue and invariably finds a place in the final cabinet note.

We are to once again make it clear that we always try to give the actual status of the issues and do not try to create unnecessary panic and confusion. We also do not take responsibility for the views and news by others.
